HISTORY

The 306th Regiment of Engineers and Engineer Train was organized in August, 1917, at Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C., under the command of Colonel Robert R. Ralston, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, and officered by officers newly commissioned from the First Officers' Training Camp. The Regiment and Train were the Engineer Troops of the 84th Division, officially designated the "Stonewall" Division, but better known as the "Wild Cats."

To build up a fighting machine of soldiers from new recruits suddenly called from their civilian environments is a difficult undertaking. Men were assigned to the regiment in small numbers. At first only A Company and D Company were formed, to be later split up into six companies as more men joined the regiment, until finally our organization reached satisfactory strength. Full of enthusiasm and energy, officers and men studied the war game, and quickly the regiment became known for its regimental spirit and discipline. The civilians had become soldiers.

But National Guard Divisions were being prepared for overseas, and our division was called upon to furnish the necessary men to bring these divisions up to strength. It was heart-breaking to officers and men alike when these assignments left us and our regiment, depleted to a mere skeleton, started all over again its task of building up an organization from raw material.

The training throughout these months of hard work was highly intensive. We learned first to be Infantrymen, and the routine was close order drill, rifle practice, bayonet exercise, skirmish drill, and there came a day later when this training was well worth its labor to all of us. With it went road building, bridge building, map making, demolition and all the accomplishments of divisional engineers.

The side issues were baseball, athletics, rifle competition and the irksome job of digging the stumps out of our regimental yard.

But we wearied of the long wait until it came our time for overseas duty. The first step was a move to Camp Sevier, Greenville, S. C., with the division on May 28th, 1918. The regiment was recruited to practically full strength shortly after arriving at Camp Sevier, and the job of bringing the new arrivals up to our high standard of discipline and training was rushed at high tension. Our success was largely due to the excellent spirit always shown by all the men, new and old, and the energy, capabilities and enthusiasm of our non-commissioned officers.

Out of a clear sky came orders to move to Camp Upton for shipment overseas. There was a mad scramble to equip, prepare records and pack up in three days. Officers, Company Clerks and Supply Sergeants worked day and night. But the job was finally finished, good-byes said, and on July 15th, 1918, we found ourselves in Camp Upton, again in a mad scramble to fill up to strength, make final preparations, equip all men completely and pass final inspections.

In the wee small hours of morning, July 30, 1918, we quietly marched out of camp, moved by train to the East River, sailed around Lower New York on a Ferry to the docks, embarked on the British steamer "Canada," stowed away like cattle in the hold. We slipped by the Statue of Liberty and out to sea, one of a convoy of thirteen troop ships, accompanied by a British cruiser and an American destroyer. Destination unknown.

Perhaps in all the history of war on land and sea there is no more imposing spectacle than the stately movement of a convoy, day by day making its way across the ocean, the destroyer out ahead always watchful, never a light at night. Always the keen eyes of the submarine guards searching the waters for the tell-tale periscopes.

But our voyage had its sorrows as well as its glories, for, despite ideal weather and a calm sea, much of our rations sooner or later went over the rail to the fish.

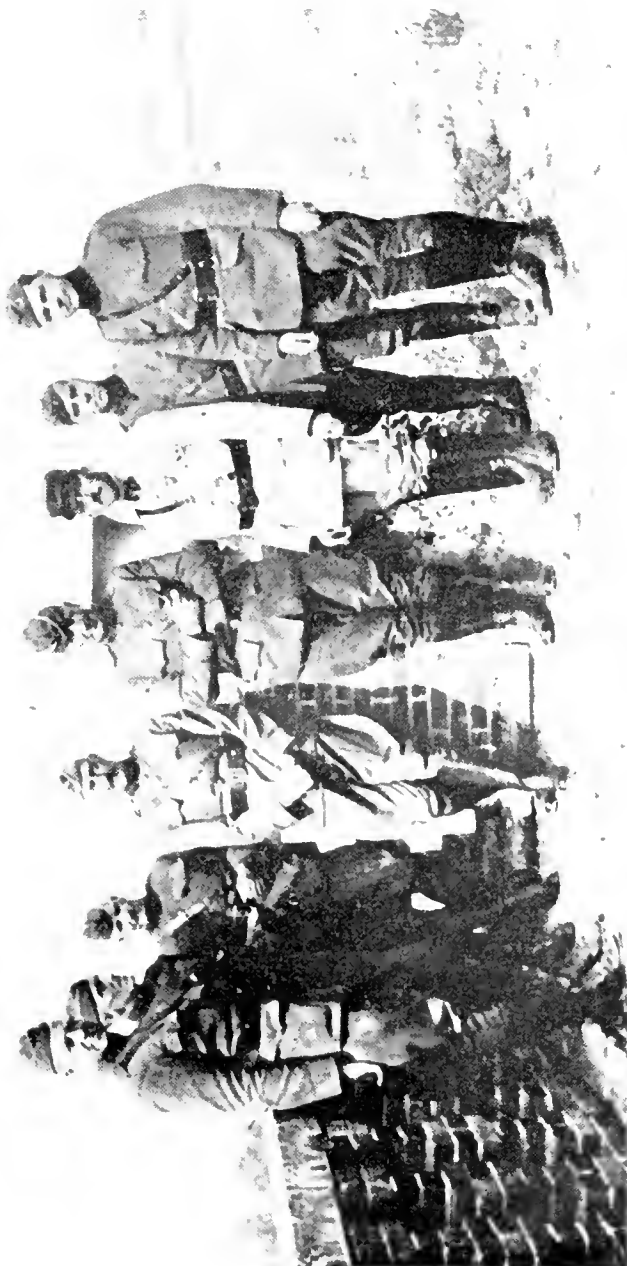

The British destroyers met us near the north coast of Ireland, and on August 11, 1918, we docked at Liverpool, England, debarked, and marched to Camp Knotty Ash, Liverpool.

England was glad to see us. The streets were massed with women and children—thousands of children. They greeted us royally, impeded our march, brought us water and cigarettes and threatened our best looking Sergeants and Corporals with kisses. But the manhood of England was not there, except in the hospital uniforms of Tommy Atkins home on enforced leave.

From Knotty Ash we moved by train across England to Winchester and the British rest camps of "Winnow Down" and "Morn Hill." We lived on British rations—mostly "goat," and in the off hours explored the Winchester Cathedral, the old school, the castle, gazed reverently at King Arthur's Round Table, and enjoyed to the limit the historical things of this quaint old city.

But our stay in England was not all play. E Company stayed behind at Liverpool to move our baggage from boat to train, and F Company preceded the regiment to South Hampton to load our baggage from train to channel steamer. Next day the regiment embarked, again got seasick, and debarked at Cherbourg—France, at last.

Two days were spent at a "rest camp" near Cherbourg before we made our first acquaintance with French box cars and European railroads, "hommes 40, cheveaux 8." What miserable little sweat boxes they are! It was a long ride from Cherbourg to Ervy, and at Ervy we unloaded and spent what was left of the night asleep in the gravel freight yard. That gravel made a good bed.

COL. RALSTON AND HIS STAFF

From Ervy we hiked to our training area near Tonnerre. The regiment was located in various villages. Headquarters was at Tronchoy. The companies were in Tronchoy, Cheney, Vezinnes and Rodley.

This was our first experience with the French billets and the French people and was in many ways most interesting. We were the first Americans in this area and were received with open arms and soon made many friends.

Intensive training in the newer attack formations and in war of movement was the schedule. Some officers and non-commissioned officers were sent to various schools and we put the finishing touches to our training.

On September 18th we marched back again to Ervy under back-breaking packs. It was the hardest march in our history. The load was terrific and many unable to make it, were brought in in the baggage trucks.

We moved by train from Ervy to Bruyeres and then had a heart-breaking hike from Bruyeres to Les Rouges-Eaux.

On September 20th, 1918, one of the memorial days in the history of the regiment, we began the march to our first assignment in a front line sector. Starting about five o'clock in the afternoon, we crossed the hills in the dark. It was our first night march. We made our objectives on time, all present. The next night saw the entire regiment in position. The regiment was scattered over a wide front.

Regimental Headquarters and Headquarters Company were located at St. Die. The Headquarters Company was engaged in a multitude of small jobs, such as mine guards, dug-out constructions for division headquarters, personnel for engineer dumps, etc.

The 1st Battalion Headquarters was located at Remoaux. Company "A" was located near St. Jean D'Ormont, living in dugouts. Their work consisted in construction of dugouts, road camouflage and trench repair. Being close up to the front line and under almost constant observation of the enemy, they were, together with the Infantry, subject to much artillery fire all during their stay in this sector.

Company "B" was located at Naimont and was engaged in dugout construction, road repair, barbed wire entanglements and saw mill operation. This company holds the record of the first company of the regiment to go "over the top" into No-Man's Land, carrying up during daylight barbed wire, pickets, etc., for a complete entanglement, in front of the position held by the 322nd Infantry at Fratelle, and in some three hours and a half at night erecting some 800 yards of barbed wire entanglements, first having put out the same length of ribard wire in front of their working party. This was the only extensive wire entanglement done by the regiment, and it is doubted if the record made was excelled by many units in the A. E. F.

It was while in this camp that the company suffered its first casualties, two men being wounded by the burst of a high explosive shell.

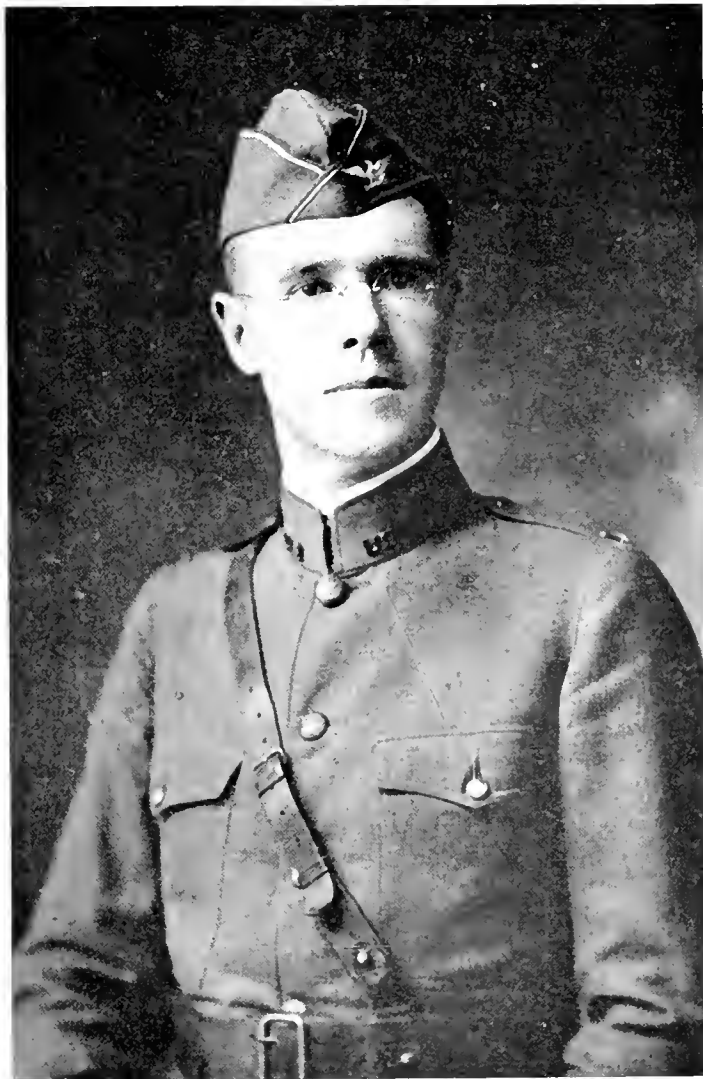

Company "C" was located at Lemoenix and was engaged in dugout construction, road camouflage and saw mill operation. Sergeant Wesson and Corporal Terry were the first to get real front line experience, while engaged in construction of a machine gun emplacement and the necessary barbed wire protection, using Infantrymen for the labor details. Frequent shelling of the camouflage kept them constantly reminded of their proximity to the enemy.

Company "D" and 2nd Battalion Headquarters were located at Moyen-moutier. The work here consisted of dugout construction and road camouflage. The bulk of the work being some four kilometers away from billets and over a road more or less under observation, it was necessary to go to this work before daylight in the morning, returning by a shorter and hidden route, but being so steep that it was impractical for ascent. It was necessary to move all timber for dugout construction at night, and the pack mules and packers were on the move every night. It was here that Wagoner Carrigan, in a spirit of wishing to please, permitted a young Infantry officer to guide him into No-Man's Land with a rolling kitchen that the Infantry were very anxious to get hold of. The kitchen, like all kitchens, moves with much clatter and bang and presently it got on Fritz's nerves and he began shelling them. The kitchen was stuck in a shell hole, the mules could not move it, the Hun was furnishing the incentive to move, the aid of some Infantrymen called from the trenches got the kitchen out of the hole and record time was made getting out of No-Man's Land back to a road where its movements were not so annoying to the Dutchman.

Company "E" was located up the Malfosse Valley and was engaged in dugout construction, wire entanglement repair and saw mill operation. Their work being divided and one-half of it being in such a position that it required more than an hour of climbing to reach it from their camp, they split up and placed a part of the company in very good billets on the hill next to their work. This company operated some four or five saw mills with very excellent results. It was in this area that they suffered their first casualty from rifle fire. Sergeant Elliott was wounded in action against an enemy patrol. Captain Harwell, then a 1st Lieutenant, was knocked senseless by a blow on his tin hat during the same scrap.

Company "F" was located at Pierre Percee, on the extreme left flank of the divisional sector. This company was engaged immediately on construction of dugouts, road camouflage near Celles, electrification of barbed wire and saw-mill operation. It was here that Sergeant Schmidt distinguished himself by rescuing an Infantry patrol that had become lost and entangled in barbed wire, under fire of our own and enemy rifles.

The 306th Engineer Train was located at Liebhay, their main duties being the operation of saw mills, obtaining and delivering engineer supplies, operation of engineer dumps at Liebhay and Raon-l'Étape, building collins and many other various and sundry jobs, besides furnishing the motor transportation for the regiment.

It was here that Colonel Ralston left the regiment to go as Corps Engineer, 4th U. S. Army Corps. Lieut. Colonel Thatcher, T. P. Laquer assumed command of the regiment. It was also here that we lost Major William M. Lamson and Captain Herbert C. Whitehurst, both being sent to attend the staff college at Langres.

As was always the case, the American soldier made No-Man's Land his land. Night patrols were the common and usual thing. Always full of possible danger, patrol work fascinated. A patrol, consisting of Infantrymen from the 323rd Infantry Regiment and Engineers from Company "D" of our regiment, under the command of 1st Lieut. Andrews, crossed No-Man's Land, cut their way through the enemy wire entanglements and explored some 800 yards of enemy front line trench, locating many machine gun emplacements, and returned without having met the enemy.

On October 19th, the regiment was withdrawn from this sector and proceeded to Fontenay for concentration and rest. In the meanwhile we had gotten our entire tool and rolling equipment, but in the Vosges sector we were short of animals, and the move to Fontenay over the mountain roads was most difficult. It was necessary to relay the heavy wagon train over some of the hills. At Fontenay the animals were given a much needed rest and the men some further instructions in war of movement and attack formation.

On November 1st, the regiment marched to Thion and entrained in two sections. The 1st Battalion and Regimental Headquarters detrained at Sorey. The 2nd Battalion detrained at Lerouville. The march was made up the Meuse valley through St. Mihiel, crossing the Meuse river on a pontoon bridge. The 2nd Battalion caught the 1st Battalion at Bannonecourt, where they were encamped. It was a long hike by night in a heavy rain, and weary and tired we crawled into a wet bed under our pup tents. Next morning Regimental Headquarters and the 1st Battalion moved out ahead to Les Monthairons, while the 2nd Battalion proceeded on and marched up the deserted streets of Verdun at 3 a. m., November 4th. The wagon train was parked in an old market house, with gaping holes in the roof and walls, the men for the most part sleeping in what had once been the jail.

The 81st Division was relieving the 35th Division and this regiment took over the work of the 110th Engineers. The Commanding Officer of the 110th Engineers, Colonel Thomas Clark, was the 1st Adjutant of the 306th Engineers during the early days at Camp Jackson.

The 1st Battalion, less Company "A," was on the right of the divisional sector with Battalion P. C. at Les Nivollette. Company "A" was stationed at Diene to guard explosives, bridges and road mines.

The 2nd Battalion was stationed on the left of the divisional sector at Camp Savoyard, just out of Belrupt, with the Battalion P. C. at the same place. A part of Company "D" was detailed as mine guards and a part to operate the narrow-gauge railroad out of Clairmont.

On the afternoon of November 7th, 1918, the Battalion Commanders were called to Regimental Headquarters at Sommedieu and told of an impending advance of the division. On November the 8th, 1918, this regiment had reconnoitering patrols on the whole divisional front, with a view to determine the necessary engineer work required to take care of a general advance. All parties reported to their Battalion Headquarters on the night of the 8th, and the situation was discussed and reports prepared. At 1:00 a. m., November 9th, 1918, messengers from Regimental Headquarters brought the orders to prepare for an advance of the division at 8:00 a. m., that morning, the 1st Battalion, less Company "A," being ordered to report to the 162nd Infantry Brigade Commander, the 2nd Battalion, less Company "D," being ordered to report to the 161st Infantry Brigade Commander, Companies "A" and "D" being held for the present in reserve.

All will remember the mad preparation to pack up and get away on time. At the appointed hour the Infantry went "over the top" and the regiment went with them.

Company "A," attached to the 2nd Colonial French Corps, moved to the Verdun-Etain-Metz highway to fill shell holes and keep the road open to truck traffic.

Companies "B" and "C," on the right flank near Haudiomont just in the rear of the Infantry, kept the roads open for the evacuation of wounded and advance of artillery. Their work was done under great difficulty and heavy fire. "C" Company demolished a heavy concrete wall, built as an obstacle across the road, only with great difficulty. "B" Company kept pace with the Infantry despite exposure to fire, from which the Infantry could seek shelter.

Company "D" was at first on the Verdun-Etain Road, but was later withdrawn and refired. "E" and "F" Companies near Moranville finishing the work of carrying the roads out to the final front line.

Company "E" was assigned the triple task of road work from Moulainville forward, from Chattillon forward, and of evacuating wounded. They pushed their roads out across No Man's Land, filling shell holes and crossing the German front line trenches. The detachment assigned to helping the wounded worked continuously under fire following close behind the Infantry. On November 11th, "E" Company was assembled and formed part of the Infantry Reserves. After being relieved from this duty, they joined "F" Company on the bridge and road work in Moranville.

Company "F" went "over the top" on November 9th, 1918, with the Infantry as Infantry, in an advance on Moranville. That night it was withdrawn from the line and assigned to road work until it again assembled to form part of the Infantry Reserves. It was relieved from this duty early November 11th, 1918. One platoon, under Lt. McKissick, was assigned to bridge building near Moranville. This work was done under very intense shell fire. The balance of the company was again assigned to road work to and beyond Moranville. Lt. Adams, with a detail of one squad, was assigned the undesirable duty of unloading enemy mines and traps. He took the teeth out of nine hundred and eighty-two of them without a casualty.

Always, roads followed close on the heels of the Infantry. Never was the artillery delayed for want of roads. "Communications open on time." That is the test of good engineers.

Our sanitary detachment went with us always and rendered wonderful assistance. Our wagon trains and rolling kitchens showed a daring unexpected in keeping us supplied with tools, ammunition and food. It is impossible to tell so big a story in all its details.

Persistent reports stated that hostilities would cease at 11:00 o'clock, but very little credit was attached to this most recent rumor. At 11:00 o'clock all artillery fire ceased abruptly on both sides, leaving a silence uncanny. For an hour no one dared hope and believe that the great war was ended. Soldiers had schooled themselves to grin and bear their hard-ships, to stifle hope, and now this new silence, so strange, so seemingly unnatural, could not be realized. That night the sky was cloudless; for miles north and south both lines were sending up rockets of all colors and descriptions. Twenty-four hours before, these same rockets would have been signals for deadly artillery fire, but this night they called on men to rejoice that the bloodiest war in history had ended. They marked a new life for man. Everyone felt it. In some it showed a strange quiet, a sudden longing for home; in others a desire to walk off alone to realize the meaning of peace.

After a few days' rest, the regiment started on a seventeen-day hike of a hundred and sixty-five miles from Verdun to Chatillon-sur-Seine, where it arrived on December 3rd.

In the 12th Training Area the Regimental Headquarters at Aisey-Sur-Seine, the regiment undertook the upkeep of some 500 kilometers of road, necessitating the scattering of the regiment over many square miles of area in details of from squads up. These details were engaged in road repair, quarry operation and direction of Infantry labor details. In addition to this work, many details of various sizes were scattered over the area, erecting hangars, installing electric light plants, bath houses, etc., under Captain Forbes. The Engineer Train furnished transportation for this work and handled it with efficiency and skill.

During the latter part of December, Colonel Charles R. Pettis was assigned to the regiment and took command. Lieut. Colonel Luquer was detailed to take charge of the Corps Educational Center at Latracey. Major Stanley C. Scott was assigned to the regiment and took command of the 1st Battalion.

On March 20th, 1919, the division was reviewed by the King and Queen of Belgium and General Pershing, and was again reviewed by General Pershing on April 10th, when he made his farewell speech to the troops.

On March 25th, Colonel Pettis was relieved of command of the regiment and ordered to London. Lieut. Colonel Luquer, having been advanced to the grade of Colonel, took over the command, but shortly after was forced to apply for return home because of the critical illness of his father. The regiment came under its present Commander, Lieut. Colonel George H. Bunker.

Under the training of Captain Wyllys H. Taylor, assisted by 1st Lieutenant Sanford P. Graves and 2nd Lieutenant Milton A. Abernathy, the regiment developed a rifle team which distinguished itself by taking third place at the A. E. F. Rifle and Pistol Shoot at LeMans, France. Lieutenant Orton B. Stauffer, Company "C," won a silver medal for his pistol shooting at this same meet.

On May 15th and 16th, 1919, the regiment entrained for the LeMans Area, where preparations were made for embarking. On May 30th, 1919, it entrained for St. Nazaire, where the final preparations were made to go on board ship. On June 3, 1919, at 9:00 o'clock in the morning, the regiment sailed from St. Nazaire Harbor on the U. S. S. Santa Malta, bound for New York. After seven days at sea, orders were received by wireless to change our course and proceed to Charleston, South Carolina, where we landed June 15th. We moved by train to Camp Jackson and demobilized June 18, 1919.

DECORATIONS AND CITATIONS.

A MESSAGE
TO
THE OFFICERS AND EXLISTED PERSONNEL
306TH REGIMENT, ENGINEERS.

Camp Jackson, South Carolina.

18 June, 1919.

On this the day you have all looked forward to since that memorable 11:00 a. m., Nov., 11, 1918, when the order of cease firing found every man of this regiment actively engaged in one of the world's greatest battles, I find a swelling up in my throat as you pass from my command to your various camps for discharge to civilian life.

You have served well and faithfully—you have done all that soldiers of a great and powerful nation are expected to do, always obedient and always loyal. Your record both at home and in France is 2nd to none, free from the slightest Taint.

As you go back again into civil life, I trust you will always live up to the high ideals you have established for yourself in this regiment—and by virtue of your broader view and experience you will always be an influence for good in your various communities.

My best wishes go out to you and from this date on, I am yours to command,

Sincerely yours,

GEO. H. BUNKER,
Lieut. Colonel, Engineers.
